

BUFFALO BILL'S ROUGH RIDERS

From All Parts of the World Coming Here.

Saturday, September 22d, will mark the return to Marshall for two performances of Buffalo Bill's Wild West and Congress of Rough Riders, which has this season attained a degree of success never before vouchered to any out-door enterprise in the history of amusements. Their recent season of twenty-four performances in New York was marked by a series of audiences that for size broke all records at the immense Madison Square Garden, every performance seeing thousands turned away unable to gain admission. The inherent merit and the genuine character of the entertainment, which is never allowed to fall below the highest standard, is in a great measure responsible for this continued popularity of Messrs. Cody & Salsbury's unique and original entertainment. But a feature that has increased public interest in the exhibition is the addition to their programme of the most realistic battle scene ever offered to a peaceful public. Messrs. Cody and Salsbury have selected as the most timely subject, patriotism-instilling and enthusiasm-producing page of recent history, the charge up San Juan Hill, as the subject of the most popular spectacular item of their interesting programme. This is produced with every attention to detail, the hill itself, the blockhouse, trenches, trees and barbed-wire fences being built in the arena in exact replica of the one in the suburbs of Santiago. To give a reality to the fight, these enterprising managers have engaged, not theatrical "supers," but nearly three hundred actual participants in the fighting around Santiago. These are made up of a number of Roosevelt's Rough Riders, Cuban insurgents and white and negro ex-regulars and volunteers of the United States Army; and besides presenting a moving tableau of the most thrilling page of recent history, gives to patriotic American people an opportunity to pay due homage to the men who fought and suffered in the trenches of Southern Cuba, and who by their valor sustained the honor of the American soldier and added new luster to American arms. The size of the Wild West arena and the number of actual soldiers employed in giving this presentation, places it on a plane far beyond that possible to be given by other amusement managers, and imitations must sink into insignificance when compared with this one.

All the old-time features of the Wild West have been retained and improved upon, and the ethnological department of the exhibition gains an added interest by the addition of contingents representing the newest colonial additions to Uncle Sam's "empire" for in the arena are seen for the first time in the United States representatives of the Filipinos, Hawaiians and Porto Ricans, giving illustrations of some of the interesting features of their daily life in their island homes. The season in our city being so limited, it behooves intending visitors to secure their seats early and be on hand in time for the grand entry, which opens the entertainment in the afternoon at 2 o'clock and in the evening at 8 o'clock.

The location of the grounds is easily accessible from all parts.

Where Postal Cards are Made.

The modest plant that turns out millions of postal cards every month for Uncle Sam is located in a little West Virginian town, high up in the Appalachian range, not far from the border line of Maryland.

The town is Piedmont, Mineral county, W. Va., and here the busy factory is at work six days in the week, making the little oblong sheets of cardboard on which so many messages of all sorts and kinds are written by all conditions of people. Here the cardboard is made from the fresh sweet spruce trees; here it is cut into the requisite size, and here the cards are printed, packed and shipped, eventually finding their way into every state, city, town and hamlet in the country, and to Cuba, Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippine Islands.

The Saratoga.

The Saratoga Hotel at Excelsior Springs, Mo., is strictly first-class, with every modern improvement, including steam heat, electric fans, etc., and caters to the best trade. Terms reasonable.
